To Whom It May Concern:

When I think of Nick Roxborough and his sincere dedication to his clients while maintaining the highest standards of ethics I am reminded of Rabbi Shimon the son of Gamliel's famous quote in the first chapter of Ethics. He said, "By three things is the world sustained: law, truth and peace."

Many times we are faced with questionable business transactions and our integrity is tested. Nick is a master of his profession and has keen insight of the law. He has a profound respect for the institution that he represents. It is abundantly clear to me that truth and integrity are important traits in his attorney client relationship.

As to "peace", well that comes with the knowledge that Nick Roxborough is representing you.

Respectfully,

David Schachter
